Maternal Pride.

"I EN'T it your son, madam, who is the adept in physical sports? A champion swimmer, if I remember right?"

"Dear me, no! My son is not a swimmer. Swimming is commonplace! Everybody can swim. There's no glory in that. My son is interested in sports of the air."

"Oh, an aviator?"

"Not exactly. He fills the balloon for the parachute jumper."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

From Bad to Worse.

HEMMANDHAW'S face wore a worried look.

"I'm in trouble," he said. "I don't seem to be able to get up early in the morning."

"Why don't you get yourself a nice little alarm clock?" the head book-keeper, suggested.

"I did, but I didn't hear the thing when it went off."

"Then why don't you get a big one?"

"I did that, too, and it made me lose too much time."

"Made you lose time?"

"Yes; it rang so loudly that it awakened the man in the next room and he sent me to the school."

Always Gave Something.

AT a recent banquet in New York Mr. W. F. McCombs told a story of a discussion on public generosity in a club smoking room in which several well-known philanthropists were mentioned and praised to the skies.

After they had been speaking for some time, Mr. McCombs said, a man in the corner remarked: "Your philanthropists are all right, but I think it is only just that my next-door neighbor should be included."

"Is he generous?" asked one.

"I should just say he is," was the emphatic reply. "No matter how many tramps go to his door, he never seems to send one of them away empty handed."

"You don't mean it!" exclaimed one of his hearers.

"I do," replied the other man. "He always gives them something; he gives them a letter of introduction to me!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Three Wishes.

A "P. M. G." reader sends us the following little story—certainly one of the best of its kind:

To the great god Buddha came the representatives of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish religions to pay him homage. Buddha, very flattered, told each of them that if they would become a monk it would be sufficient

"What do you wish?" he asked the Catholic. The answer was "Glory." "You shall have it," said Buddha, and, turning to the Protestant, "What do you wish?" "Money." "You shall have it." "And you?" This to the Jew. "I do not want much," quoth he. "Give me the Protestant's address."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight by 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little fargel with their meals for a while and note results. Kiers is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take a diet—one about 1,500 calories a meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look and feel or what your friends say and think. The scale and the tape measure will tell their own story. You can gain five or six pounds in the first fourteen days by following Kiers' diet directly. And, best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mingling with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—pre-pare it in an easy, assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now comes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating new delicious nourishment for the cells and tissues of your body and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive.
